

Storytelling to Build Character and Values

Organised and Presented by

In Collaboration with

If you are interested in using the gentle, persuasive skills of oral storytelling for values education, this is for you. These 3-hour workshops, available as morning or afternoon sessions on Fri, Mar 12, 2010 and Sat, Mar 13, 2010 will provide a firm grounding in using storytelling to impart character and values building messages to the young or among the community. Suitable for teachers, parents and the other adults working in education, counselling and personal development.

You will receive guidance in:

- choosing suitable stories with implicit values for your needs.
- learning to tell a story to persuade rather than to dictate.
- adding details to make the story uniquely yours.
- rehearsal and performance techniques.
